

The Japanese Journal of Language in Society

Submission Guidelines (Revised January 15, 2021)

1. Submissions are limited to unpublished manuscripts. Manuscripts deriving from oral presentations at conferences or which have been included in conference proceedings, papers which have been published as part of a research fund report, and unpublished Master theses or parts of Doctoral theses may also be submitted. Doctoral theses published on institutional repositories and other such forms on the Internet are considered as unpublished.
2. Manuscripts of the same content of manuscripts that have been submitted to other journals will not be accepted.
3. Submissions are limited to members of the Japanese Association of Sociolinguistic Sciences. When there is more than one author, the first author must be a member of the Association. Exceptions may be made if the editorial committee requests a manuscript.
4. Manuscripts may be submitted at any time. However, deadlines may be set for special issues.
5. Submissions should be made in accordance with the latest version of the 'Submission Guidelines' and 'Style Guide' as published on the website of the Japanese Association of Social Sciences.
6. Submissions will be reviewed by the editorial committee who will decide whether or not the manuscript will be accepted.
7. Authors will receive no payment for accepted manuscripts.
8. 20 offprints of each paper will be supplied to the author for free.
9. The Association is responsible for publication expenses. If special expenses are required for specialized printing, the author will be responsible for these expenses.
10. The author is responsible for obtaining permission to reproduce any diagrams, illustrations, or photographs for which they do not own the copyright.
11. The Association retains the copyright of accepted papers. The Association retains the right to copy and reproduce accepted papers in both electronic and hard copy form.
12. The author of the manuscript may publish the manuscript on an institutional repository or on his/her own website. However, these may not be published within two years of publication in the Journal.
